Latest update from Shailesh Naidu, president of the Fiji Chefs:

“Hi Murray, I appreciate your call with concern this morning, at the moment there’s big breakdown on communication locally, assuming no power supply, broken lines and so forth. However, from the little information I have, the other parts of West have been really hit badly. It is taken as the worst Fiji has ever had. My own Family is based in Nadi but had no chance to touch base from yesterday afternoon.

We are at Coral Coast/Sigatoka and does not look that bad apart from the big mess. I’m still at the resort but some of my staff have started to come to work and I’m getting their feedback on the local community.

Will keep you guys posted when I hear more but thanks for checking... Appreciated (Gotta get back to clean up).

Shailesh.”

World Chefs Without Borders is an organisation that exists with Worldchefs and through NZ Chefs we are organising financial aid that we will hand over the Fiji Chefs Association later down the track. All monies received is monitored through Worldchefs and all money received goes to the country in need. You have all seen photos of the devastation and heard the media reports so please give generously to this cause.
